EDUCATION FOR CREATIVES

Dear Readers,

We've had a lot of fun this past year meeting you at trade shows, conferences (including our first New Riders Voices That Matter Web Design conference) and even through some contests we sponsored. One contest resulted in naming the bunny that has graced the cover of every Visual QuickStart Guide for more than 15 years. Our readers submitted some great names, and after several tough days of deliberation, the Peachpit judges settled on Moxie™, a name that denotes skill and determination—the very attributes that the Visual QuickStart Guide series aims to instill in all of its readers! In another contest, The $1,000 Question, one fortunate soul will walk away with $1,000 worth of the best digital photography equipment recommended on Peachpit TV by Peachpit's own professional photographer-authors.

Our Web Design conference (www.voicesthatmatter.com) was a huge success, so stay tuned for information about our 2008 events. But conferences aren't our only new endeavors here at Peachpit. In addition to the content we bring you in print books, we're now offering videos. So whether you're learning Final Cut, Photoshop, or some other creative application, our new lineup of video products (www.peachpit.com/video) includes instruction from our top authors and our top series. These videos can be accessed on our Web site as well as in our online reference library (<http://safari.peachpit.com>). Once you make your purchase, all you have to do is log in, and within minutes you can start learning whatever you need right when you need it. We've also updated and refreshed our Web site with integrated blogs, articles, and podcasts. You can browse our latest releases at Peachpit.com anytime, watch an episode of Peachpit TV, or comment on our blog posts—we're always learning from you, so keep in regular touch!

All the very best,

Nancy Aldrich-Ruenzel
Publisher, Vice President and Lifelong Learner

About Peachpit

We've been publishing our friendly, straightforward computer how-to guides since 1986 when the whole operation was based out of our founder's house, who also happened to be a computer book author himself. Since then we've grown up and moved into a real office in Berkeley, become part of a global publishing company (Pearson Education), created a ton of popular, best-selling books and series, and formed close relationships with leading software companies that have resulted in very rewarding partnerships. Over the past few years Peachpit has also developed digital product offerings, such as eBooks, online video products, and Safari Books Online, as well as created our first conference series.

And yet, after all these years and all these new products, our mission hasn't changed: We're still creating technology books that go beyond the basic manual to make information accessible through instructional design and the best writing and editing in the industry. All of our books offer easy-to-follow, straight-talking instructions, combined with lots of visual aids, tips, and techniques designed to take your skills up a notch or two or three.

But that's not to say that all of our books are the same. Each series and title has its unique strengths and brand of instruction. We invite you to browse our imprints and their series until you find the books that teach the way you want to learn.
